

National Background: Netherlands 2015

André Bouwman (Universitaire Bibliotheeken Leiden)

This report has been compiled with the kind assistance of Ad Leerintveld (Koninklijke Bibliotheek) and Jos Biemans (Universiteitsbibliotheek Amsterdam).

The Koninklijke Bibliotheek provides a survey of libraries and related organizations in the Netherlands on its website. Note that not all mentioned libraries hold manuscripts or even special collections.

A useful guide on special collections in Dutch research libraries is J. Mateboer (ed.), Repertorium bijzondere collecties. Historische en moderne verzamelingen in universiteitsbibliotheken, de Koninklijke Bibliotheek, de bibliotheek van de Koninklijke Nederlandse Akademie van Wetenschappen en de bibliotheken met wetenschappelijke steunfunctie. Den Haag 1997. A digital version of this guide is part of the Bibliopolis website, chapter Collections (use “handschriften” or “archieven” as search terms)

The best guide in English is M.L. Brogan (ed.), Research Guide to libraries and archives in the Low Countries. New York [etc] 1990. Please note that information about addresses, opening times, etc. in these tools may be outdated.

The largest manuscript collections are held by the Koninklijke Bibliotheek and the university libraries of Leiden and Amsterdam. Other institutions with substantial historical collections (estimations of medieval codices between brackets): Universiteitsbibliotheek Utrecht (650), Universiteitsbibliotheek Groningen (350) Atheneumbibliotheek Deventer (120), libraries of Museum Meermanno, The Hague (200) and Museum Catharijneconvent, Utrecht (300).

Archiefnet / Archieven Netherlands (Archival institutions)

<http://www.archiefnet.nl/index.asp?taal=en> / <http://www.archieven.nl/en?milang=en>

Dutch administration has a national, provincial and local level; this triple structure was reflected in the institutions responsible for the keeping of public records: the Algemeen Rijksarchief, twelve Provincial Archives and numerous municipal archives. Recent years, however, saw a clustering of municipal archives into regional archives (e.g. Regionaal archief Leiden) and of provincial and municipal archives (e.g. Zeeuws Archief, Utrechts Archief, Noord-Hollands Archief). In 2002 the Rijksarchief in Zuid-Holland and the Algemeen Rijksarchief merged into the Nationaal Archief. Most of these institutions also hold private archives and manuscripts. To search the Dutch archives one may use two websites:

- Archiefnet – Dutch archives listed and linked by provinces and by towns (A-Z)
- Archieven.nl – accesses over 14,000 inventories of some 30 archival institutions

Koninklijke Bibliotheek, Den Haag (KB)

<http://www.kb.nl/en>

Established in 1798, incorporating the former library of the stadholders of the House of Orange-Nassau and of several governmental institutions. An important part of the collection is constituted by the loan from the Royal Academy of Sciences (1937). After 1945 the KB developed into the National Library of the Netherlands, with a coordinating and facilitating role for Dutch research libraries.

Major collections:

- Medieval manuscripts (1,500), including 450 illuminated manuscripts, also substantial numbers of liturgical manuscripts and manuscripts in Middle Dutch
- Post-medieval manuscripts (5,000), including over 500 alba amicorum, 130,000 letters and personal collections.
- The collection post-medieval manuscripts also incorporates more or less significant separate documents concerning Dutch history (national, regional or local), literature and law
